WORK of GREAT INTEREST. C H R I S T I N I

By LAURA J. CURTIS.

1 vol., 12mo., 384 pages. Cloth, price $1.

Though the writer of this work is young, she is evidently no unpracticed writer, and we feel confident, from the perusal of Christine, that she is one who will make her mark in the field of iterature, and take her stand in the very foremost rank of our the subjects of which she treats; and consequently she writes forcibly and with the power and effect that spring from the tion which keeps in check the aims and aspirations which fill her young heart and fire her ardent imagination, finally breaks through the barriers that oppose her progress, and becomes what her fine natural talent fitted her to be—a highly educated, faswhich she always had a fancy-to devote her fine talents to the purpose of elevating the social and physical condition of her own sex. These schemes are considered Utopian by her friends and she is stigmatized as a dreamer and visionary. Finally, they carry their opposition so far as, by false representations, to decey her into an asylum for the insane, where she is confined with the determination to cure her of what they consider her riumphs over her false friends and the difficulties that beset her path, pursues her cherished plans with success and becomes the instrument of rescuing from degradation and misery many of her own sex. But, also, for human resolves; love which she had scerned, finally triumphe, and she at last fills the position of a leving wife—one which she was as well calculated to adorn.

"This excellent work has never been presented in English, and will be welcomed with pleasure by many thousands who will lose no time in availing themselves of it as a source of information on a subject of growing interest and importance. It will be enriched by considerable additions, written by the translator, which will put the reader in possession of a knowledge of the present social, financial, and political condition of the Cubain. The knowledge which Mr. Thrasher has of Cubs from a long residence there, and from his having devoted many years to a study of its condition and its relation to the mother country and the United States, emiscotly qualifies him for the preparation of such a work. Of the merits of the original no doubt can
